SRI M. S. KRISHNAN.—You were also pleased to say that some amount of force was necessary. Is it not so ?

SRI H. M. CHANNABASAPPA.—If I say that why should I not say the same thing here. I never do like that. So, when I told them very clearly that certain civilised forceful persuasion is necessary, all of them agreed.

SRI M. S. KRISHNAN.—The cat is out of the bat.

SRI H. M. CHANNABASAPPA.—Forceful argument does not mean I should use force. The argument was forceful. There is a lot of difference between force and forceful argument. In order to carry conviction to people, certain amount of forceful argument is necessary. Therefore, I assure this House that we have given clear instructions that no force of any kind should be utilised for motivating people to take up to family planning and I am glad that many Hon'ble members have ventilated their views about it. I agree that no force should be used.

SRI M.S. KRISHNAN.—We will be satisfied if the Hon'ble Minister gives an assurance that he will not use the police force.

SRI H. M. CHANNABASAPPA,—Alright. Agreed.
